STAR WARS™

JANGO FETT™ BLASTERS

Jango Fett: renowned bounty hunter and slain father of Boba Fett. He was so capable in battle that an entire army of clone soldiers was created from his DNA. However, even Jango's legendary combat skills were not enough when he faced Jedi Master Mace Windu in the first battle of the Clone Wars, and the feared bounty hunter was struck down. Although Jango Fett carries many lethal devices in his arsenal, his primary weapon of choice is a pair of WESTAR-34 blaster pistols.

The original hero props were constructed of machined aluminum and brass barrel, body and trigger with cast resin grips. Several molded resin props were made for use in action scenes so that the intricate hero props would not become damaged during filming. A metal cover was soldered over the trigger guard of one of the hero props so the actor portraying Jango Fett, Temuera Morrison, could spin the pistol on his finger with an old western flourish before replacing it in the holster. Because of the way this action sequence is filmed the modified trigger guard isn't visible in the movie scene.

The Master Replicas design team completed a thorough examination of the original hero props in the Lucasfilm archive. Their study included taking measurements of the props as well as matching colors and finishes of the metal components. Our designers also conducted a digital scan of the prop that they converted to a Pro-Engineer (Pro-E) file in order to recreate an exact three-dimensional model of the props. Using the 3D model as reference, our manufacturer created tooling patterns that were used to produce CNC (computer numerically controlled) machined parts for the replicas with astonishing accuracy.

We are pleased to present our Jango Fett blaster replicas with one of the most unique display cases we've ever designed. We hope these exceptional replicas will become a focal point in your collection.
